

The Dark forest

Once there was a dark forest. The trees swayed in the wind as a high pitch howling echoed around the gloomy dead trees. Nobody dared to go into the dark forest. Nearby the forest was a jolly city that was crowded with people and life. The city also had animals, wooden huts that had up to five people in it.

Everybody was happy until a girl named Isla went wandering into the forest. Ten days passed by without the return of Isla. The people of the city grew more and more worried. Isla was somewhere in that forest. Was she dead? Was she injured? Nobody knew what would happen to this adventurous girl.

Somewhere amongst the crowd stood an eleven year old boy named Jamie. He was tall and freckles shaped like stars. He wanted to be adventurous. He wanted to be the first person to find Isla. He told his parents, gathered supplies and then set off on his journey.

At last he found the edge of the forest. The howling was deafening. It was like it was bouncing around the trees. It was as if it was following him. The leaves blew around the forest floor scattering mud over Jamie's bare legs. At last a small footprint followed by another and another, there it was-a whole trail of them. Jamie took a large gulp and with trembling legs he took a step towards Isla.

After hours of walking, Jamie heard a rustling followed by leaves being scattered all over the forest floor. Jamie was startled. That was the first noise (apart from himself) he had heard for hours. The sky quickly got dark and Jamie decided to rest for the night. When the morning came the nervous herp ate one of his supplies and carried on with his rescue mission. Now it was getting boring.

Just as Jamie was about to give up he spotted a muddy shoe. He ran over to find a sleeping girl. "Isla?" Jamie cried "Is that you?". One of the girl's eyes opened "yes" she said thankfully. "I wanted to prove to my class mates that I can do it but I got lost" said Isla. "Let's go home" Jamie said wearily. So their journey continued but it wasn't long before daylight filled the forest. Everybody was delighted to see them. From then on, no one was afraid to go into the dark forest.

THE END